

Mr. Gary Fine is the Coordinator for the World Bank's Europe and Central Asia Region for the Global Development Learning Network (GDLN), a World Bank–initiated network of distance learning centers worldwide that collaborate on developmental issues. He is also a Senior Private Sector Development Specialist in the Europe and Central Asia Region, where he has been involved in a range of private sector and financial sector development issues, including SME development and microfinance, investment climate reform, corporate governance and competitiveness. Mr. Fine previously served as an adviser to several CIS governments on privatization and other private sector development issues, and spent a number of years as an investment banker and chief financial officer. He holds an M.B.A. from Columbia University.